Open System of an Organization

Organization's priorities come from its mission, vision and strategic goals. Organization's personality comes from its culture and values. Organization's activities are driven by its leadership, formal and informal. 1. Inputs 2. Recurring Processes 3. Outputs 4. Outcomes Standard materials and Subsystems to process the Tangible results from Changes to people the organization, outside organization, concepts used by the inputs and generate from using the outputs, organization, for outputs, for example: products or services, for example: for example, customers example: 1. Planning (of strategic, who are more: business, resources) Collaborators Books 2. Developing (revenue, Happy Customers Courses employees, facilities) Financially strong Facilities Fixed cars 3. Operating (supervision, Employed Ideas Food services, advertising, Literate Location Furniture finances, facilities) Independent Money Houses 4. Evaluating (employees, Healthy People New customers services, processes) Mobile Suppliers with feedback to Patients Transported Technologies Planning Revenue ■ Time • Etc. Trained customers • Etc. • Etc.

A healthy organization has continued 5) feedback between its inputs, processes, outputs, outcomes and external environment that the organization 6) evaluates for continued 7) learning and adjustments.

Feedback from the environment is from organizational inputs, environmental scanning, market research and customer feedback.

Feedback to the environment is via public relations, advertising and promotions.